

Twitteriversity

This guide is for HCPs who have never tweeted before and wish to start tweeting in a professional capacity. As with any journey in you need to start as a student...

Student Tweeter

A guide to getting started on Twitter twitter will guide you through registration.

When you register use an email address that you have regular easy access to, twitter will send you emails to indicate when you are followed, mentioned or sent a message by a twitter friend.

You'll be asked to chose a twitter name, use your name and or keep it punchy.

Twitter will suggest some followers for you, but twitter doesn't know you yet, so the suggestions are pretty mainstream, as twitter gets to know you it will recommend better suggestions for you!
We have made some suggestions in our tips to introduce you to nurse related tweeters. You'll be asked to chose a twitter name, use your name and or keep it punchy.

Your picture is quite important, it quickly identifies you amongst lots of other tweeters. Also think carefully about your bio, think about adding your professional & personal interests, who you are looking to tweet and links to more information about you or your work.

a hashtag - a way of marking tweets clicking on this will take you to all tweets containing this hashtag

your name

your twitter handle

if you mention someone elses twitter handle in your tweet they will be alerted twitter picture click on this to expand click here to reply to this tweet

click here to retweet this tweet - pass it on you your followers

web link click on this to go to a web page

the date & time the tweet was sent click here to favourite this tweet

Know Your Twitter Anatomy

by @WeNurses

Here are a few We's that a tweeting HCP should follow. By following and listening to your Twitter timeline it can teach you lots about how to tweet and get a feel for what you can learn from Twitter and how to get involved

- @WeNurses - @WeDocs - @WeAHPs
- @WeMHnurses - @WeLDnurses - @WeDistrictNurse
- @WeMidwives - @WePharmacists - @WeSchoolNurses
- @WeCYPnurses - @WeGPNs - @WeEOLC
- @WeHealthVisitor - @WePharmerOZ - @WeFinance_